Tune in to watch “Wicked” co-creator Winnie Holzman interview Jan Oxenberg

Critics Laud Jan's Originality Anew!

Dan Schindel writes: Pioneering queer filmmaker Jan Oxenberg’s documentary memoir “Thank You and Good Night”...fell into obscurity. Now, this beautiful-looking restoration is streaming on the Criterion Channel (along with two of Oxenberg’s early shorts), and you should seek it out immediately.

Nicolas Pedrero-Setzer writes: A lot has happened in the last 30 years in terms of documentarian remembrance, whether that be in the melancholy of “Dear Zachary” or the vivacity of “Varda by Agnès,” no film has ever come close to capturing the uniqueness of Oxenberg’s cinematic grammar.

Lesbians on Criterion!

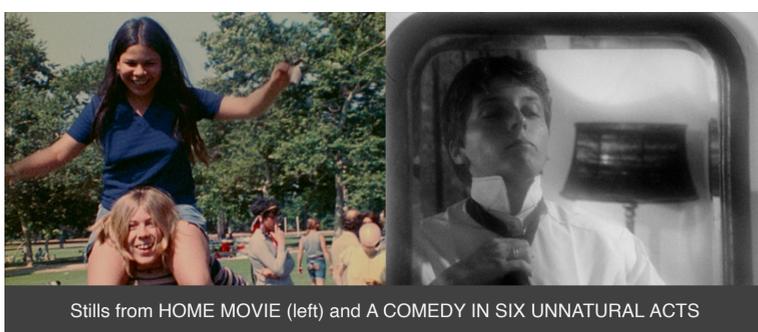

HOME MOVIE and A COMEDY IN SIX UNNATURAL ACTS solidified Jan’s role as a queer film pioneer early on in her career. Using home movie footage and her trademark talent for parody, HOME MOVIE explores Oxenberg’s teenage years and incipient self-awareness: “The thing I liked best about being a cheerleader was being with the other cheerleaders.”

Thanks to MoMA, the Women’s Film Preservation Fund and HFPA!

HOME MOVIE was celebrated by the Museum of Modern Art in January 2020 as part of its “To Save and Project” festival of newly-restored films. It was restored with support from the Women’s Film Preservation Fund and the Hollywood Foreign Press Association.

Thanks to the Andy Warhol Foundation and the HFPA!

A send-up of lesbian stereotypes, each scene in A COMEDY IN SIX UNNATURAL ACTS satirizes a different Hollywood film genre. Many thanks to the Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts and the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for their support of the restoration. It will be featured as part of a historic 33-film retrospective, “Pioneers of Queer Cinema,” set to open in Los Angeles with the UCLA Film & Television Archive in 2021 and then to tour the country.
